AGENCIES AT VIENNA HOPE FOR RENEWAL OF EXODUS TO ISRAEL

The emigration of Jews from Rumania has been stopped since March 6 but Jewish welfare workers there hope it will resume in the near future. The emigration started mysteriously in September. Before March 6 tens and sometimes hundreds of Rumanian Jews had been arriving in Vienna daily on the Orient Express, which reaches there at 6:45 a.m.

Officials and agencies dealing with the Jewish migrations there said the Rumanian Government had granted visas to "several thousands" of Jews who had not yet arrived in Vienna, according to the New York Times. These people have sold their homes and left their jobs to emigrate. They were considered too far committed for the Rumanian Government to bar their exit now.

Only an hour's train ride from the Iron Curtain to the north and west, Vienna has been host in recent months to Israel bound Jews from Poland as well as from Rumania. Last year 4,000 of the 30,000 to 45,000 Jews in Poland were allowed to leave in a slow but steady emigration that is still continuing.

Since the start of the Rumanian emigration more than 15,000 Jews have left Rumania in what her Government has officially termed a "humanitarian family reunion program." The emigrants from Rumania have been allowed to bring or ship only 154 pounds of clothing, inexpensive personal effects and financially valueless keepsakes, such as photograph albums. Everything else has been either sold to raise money for the trip and necessary travel documents or just left behind in abandoned homes in Bucharest, Cluj, Arad, Jassy and scores of other towns in Transylvania, Bukovina and Moldavia. Before World War II these towns contained flourishing Jewish communities.

The Polish emigrants are allowed to take out of the country an unlimited amount of clothing, household items, tools and other valuables. Girls bring hulahoops, their mothers concert grand pianos and sewing machines, and their fathers cameras and watches that they hope to sell in Israel to raise money for a new start in life.

The emigrants from both countries are from all walks of life and of all ages. But there is an emphasis on youth. "We make the trip for our children," a father from Jassy said. On a recent Polish transport thirteen of the fifty-two emigrants were less than 12 years of age.

The halt in the Rumanian emigration has caused a family separation program to grow out of the reunion measures, at least for the time being. There were several cases on the last trains from Bucharest of wives who had come without husbands and vice versa.

Before the halt it had not been unusual for separate members of a family to have passports issued within a few days of each other, says the New York Times. Those with passports usually left before the expiration date confident that their spouses and children would follow shortly and would join them in Vienna.

Protests Entry Of Ex-Aide Of Nazis To U.S.

Dr. Ferdinand Durcansky, who served as Foreign Minister of the Nazi puppet regime of Slovakia in 1939-40, made his first public appearance in the U.S. at New York, at a celebration of the twentieth anniversary of Slovak independence, held under the auspices of the Slovak League of America, at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, where he spoke.

Earlier in the day, Representative Emanuel Celler, Democrat, of Brooklyn, N. Y., told the American Jewish Congress that he was trying to learn "how a former leader of the Nazi puppet regime in World War II" had entered the country says the New York Times. Mr. Celler said that he had been advised by the Immigration and Naturalization Service that it had no record of Dr. Durcansky's arrival. Dr. Durcansky, who said he was chairman of the Council of the Anti-Bolshevik Bloc of Nations with headquarters at Munich, Germany, arrived from Munich on a visa.

Prior to the luncheon, Dr. Durcansky listed passages from the tenth volume of "Documents on German Foreign Policy, 1918-1945," published by the United States Government Printing Office, at Washington, D.C., in 1957. One document, written by a German official to the German Foreign Office in 1939, suggested that Dr. Durcansky was not cooperating in the implementation of German foreign policy.

Dr. Durcansky also said that Volume 9 listed accusations against him by the same German official, who reported that Dr. Durcansky was anti-Nazi and pro-Jewish.

The former Slovak official said that he had applied for a visa in Munich in 1948 but received no answer. He said he applied again in 1950, but was rejected on the ground that he was "a Communist."

At the Nuremberg war trials he was accused by the Czech Government of being a war criminal. In 1947, Czech courts pronounced death sentences on him and Joseph Tiso, former president of the Slovak State. Dr. Durcansky had fled from Slovakia in 1945. Dr. Tiso was hanged, says the New York Times. The Council of Free Cze-

New U. S. Envoy To Israel, 33, Held To Be Of Highest Quality

The appointment of Ogden R. Reid as Ambassador to Israel headed a list of nominations sent to the Senate for confirmation by President Eisenhower. Mr. Reid whose residence is at Purchase, N. Y., was formerly president and editor of The New York Herald Tribune. A Republican, he is 33 years old. His father was Ogden Mills Reid and his grandfather Whitelaw Reid. With his brother, Whitelaw, he is the third generation of Reids to have been associated with the management of the paper.

His nomination was referred to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, says the New York Times. Staff members said several committeemen have expressed a desire to question him about his qualifications. After new stories had appeared on Mr. Reid's probable appointment, Senator J. W. Fulbright, committee chairman, denounced the appointment of "political envoys."

In a letter to John Foster Dulles, Secretary of State, Mr. Fulbright at the time demanded fuller information on nominees to diplomatic posts and suggested starting with Mr. Reid. He then told the Senate from the floor he hoped the President and Secretary of State, in considering such appointments, "will be able to resist pressures from any national committee which tends to put partisan consideration above those of the national interest."

Several Democratic Senators had complained that the Republican National Committee was dictating the selection of candidates for important posts at home and abroad. It was against this

Noted Cancer Expert Was Aquarium Geneticist

Dr. Myron Gordon, of 53 Sterling Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., well-known geneticist and cancer research specialist, died apparently of a heart seizure at an oculist's office in the Fox Theatre building in downtown Brooklyn. He had gone to the office to have his eyeglasses refitted. His age was 59 years.

Dr. Gordon was a genetics associate of the American Museum of Natural History, the New York Zoological Society, and the New York Aquarium, and was principal investigator for the National Cancer Institute, says the New York Times. An extremely active man, he also found time to teach at New York and Columbia Universities.

He was known to many New Yorkers through the tank displays of small tropical fishes, principally platys and swordtails, which he sometimes showed at meetings of the zoological group and elsewhere to demonstrate cases of melanoma in fish. A melanoma is a tumor containing dark pigment. He had gathered some of these specimens in expeditions to Honduras and other parts of Central America.

A native of Odessa, Russia, he was brought to the U.S. as a child and naturalized in 1912. He received his B. S. at Cornell University in 1926, his M. S. there the following year, and, in 1929, his Ph. D. in zoology. He started as an assistant at the Heckscher Research Foundation at Cornell in 1925 and had worked as a research fellow in zoology at Yale University and the University of Michigan.

From 1931 to 1937 he was in charge of the fish genetics laboratory at Cornell, says the New York Herald Tribune, a period which laid the foundation for his internationally-known work for the New York Zoological Society in which he showed that the genes of tropical fish transmit susceptibility to cancer development and that some types of human cancer may therefore be hereditary.

In 1938, Dr. Gordon became associated with the Department of Anatomy at the Yale University School of Medicine, and from that year through 1940 he held a Guggenheim fellowship.

Bnai Brith U.S. Study Shows Jews Faced With "Unyielding" Prejudice In Housing

Discrimination against Jews in housing exists in American communities from coast to coast despite a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in 1948 that discriminatory restrictive covenants were legally unenforceable, the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith said in a report of a year-long study of housing patterns under the direction of Arnold Forster, A. D. L. civil rights director.

Although the report dealt solely with discrimination against Jews, says the New York Herald Tribune, it noted parenthetically that "religious housing discrimination does not approach the magnitude of housing restrictions because of race; the tragic lot of most of the 25,000,000 Americans of the Negro race is inequality, ghettoization, and slums."

One of the most serious allegations made by the A. D. L. dealt with the incorporated village of Bronxville, N. Y. The A. D. L. said that in the mile-square community with 6,500 residents there was not a single "known Jewish family."

The statement concerning Bronxville also said that real estate brokers of the Jewish faith never received listing of Bronxville homes "to be sold in an unrestricted market" and that even in apartment buildings in Bronxville "there are no known Jewish tenants."

Raymond M. Urquhart, village administrator of Bronxville, asked about this section of the report, said: "It is my understanding that we have some Jewish families in the village. Where they are I don't know because I am not that familiar with every segment of our village society. I assume the survey received a great deal of careful study on the part of the Anti-Defamation League but I have no comment on their findings."

According to the report, discrimination against Jews exists in exclusive areas or suburbs of Chicago, Seattle, Birmingham, Houston, Miami, Washington and other cities, says the New York Herald Tribune. Even New York City, where approximately 50 per cent of the Jewish population of the United States resides, is not free of anti-Jewish housing discrimination, the report notes. Particularly in instances where co-operative apartments are for sale "Jews are bluntly told they are not wanted," the report said:

The A. D. L. surveyed 175 luxury co-operative apartment houses in Manhattan, managed by thirteen of the city's largest real estate firms. The finding was that in one-third of the buildings there were no Jewish tenants.

The Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith reported that discrimination in housing was "the most persistent and unyielding expression of prejudice facing American Jews today, and probably the most damaging."

The study showed, according to the report, that "gentlemen's agreements," quota systems, and club plans, "have been developed in cities and communities thousands of miles apart to exclude those of the Jewish faith from desirable middle and higher income housing."

The League, which works to combat bigotry and discrimination, held that this had produced "the anomaly of 'Christian ghettos' in various areas of the country where there is a normal intermingling of Christian and Jewish populations."

The League said that similar situations existed in Chicago, Seattle, Birmingham, Houston, Miami, and Washington, says the New York Times. The League's survey said that the spread of housing bias "is clearly mirrored" in Chicago and its environs. It said that such communities as Kenilworth, Lake Forest, Barrington, and Palatine "are almost completely closed to Jews. More than half of at least 5,000 cooperative apartments in Chicago are believed to be discriminatory or to be operated on a strict quota limitation of Jews, under an explicitly stated policy," it said.

In Ohio, the survey said, "Jews are barred from some apartment houses in Cleveland, Columbus, and Cincinnati." It reported that in Michigan, the "suburb of Lathrop Village and other Oakland County sections have entire residential areas closed to Jews."

The New England states and New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the report said, "are crisscrossed by residential communities and var-

Miss Weber, the bride-to-be, was in a blue silk dress, with a hat of white flowers; and a wristlet of white carnations. Pink and white gladioli and carnations composed the table adornment.

Youth Aliyah 25th Anniversary Of Child Rescue Is Now

Youth Aliyah, which was instrumental in rescuing 90,000 children from 72 countries of the world, is celebrating its 25th anniversary now. In Israel and in every country where Youth Aliyah has its affiliations, various events are highlighting and commemorating the scope of Youth Aliyah work, and the contribution it has made to every phase of life in Israel.

Mrs. William Riven, national president of the Hadassah Organization of Canada, and Mrs. Ezra Lozinski, national vice-president, and national chairman of Youth Aliyah, are there. Mrs. John Diefenbaker, Youth Aliyah patroness of Canada, sent personal greetings. The world patroness of Youth Aliyah, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, and Elisabeth, Queen Mother of Belgium, are attending celebrations in Israel.

The story of Youth Aliyah is replete with courage, determination, and self-sacrifice. In 1933, with the advent of Hitlerism, came the systematic persecution and extermination of Jews. As the power of Nazism grew, and as the tide of conquest submerged people after people, so too, did the suffering of the Jewish people increase, and become Europe-wide. Certain death faced the children of Germany. The answer was to get them out of Germany, and bring them to Israel. Youth Aliyah came into being organized for rescue work. In a steady stream children were smuggled over mountains and across frontiers by agents of Youth Aliyah.

It is 25 years since the first group of homeless children arrived in Palestine and settled down to a new life. More groups began to come as Austria, Poland, Czechoslovakia were added to the list of Hitler conquests. The Second World War came and rescue was more imperative than ever. The Youth Aliyah workers increased their efforts and thousands of survivors were brought out of war-torn areas. In Israel, arrangements were made to take the new arrivals into collective villages, and placed in groups of 40.

The Youth Aliyah program was work, study, and integration into the life of the group. A youth guide, who cared for their particular problems and took charge of their training, was allotted to them. Their day consisted of several hours of school, learning the Hebrew language, and general education. The other half was devoted to physical work on the farms and in the rural industries. They were encouraged to undertake hobbies, learn music and to dance, and to take decisions as a group and help each other solve mutual problems. They began to acquire a sense of responsibility not only for themselves but for others in important and practical matters of every day living.

Efforts had to be made to bring out thousands of children from North Africa, Libya, Tunisia, Algeria, Tangiers, Morocco and Egypt. When Iraq expelled the whole of the Jewish community, many more thousands were made homeless. After a two-thousand-year exile in Yemen, the children of this Arabian peninsula also came under the aegis of Youth Aliyah. The movement grew rapidly and was now caring for approximately 14,000 children every year as it still does today.

Children's villages were set up, as well as collective settlements and farm schools. Clubs were sponsored in new immigrant towns; the girls learned sewing and domestic science; the boys carpentry, metalwork, and other crafts. The fight against ignorance and illiteracy was being carried on. Special courses were established for teachers, grounded in psychology, so that they could affectively deal with the varied problems which presented themselves. The children have become farmers, settling and defending Israel's vulnerable borders; they have entered all sorts of trades and professions; many have become leaders in Israel's economy, in its political life, and its development in science and research. This year many other children from Poland, Hungary, and Rumania will find a haven of refuge in Israel.

Greenspan, of Sudbury, Ont.; and Mr. and Mrs. J. Rosenzweig, of Windsor, Ont. A breakfast was served to the Tfillen Club of the Synagogue; and to out-of-town guests, the following morning, at the Synagogue, by Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Kirshenbaum, grandparents of the bar-mitzvah.

Kenneth Chaim Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Walker, 24 Dunloe Road, was called to the Reading of the Law, in celebration of his bar-mitzvah, at Beth Tzedec Synagogue. He is the brother of Alice, aged sixteen years; and of Diana, seven; grandson of Mrs. Rosa Dennis, 24 Dunloe Road, and the late Morris Dennis; and the late Mr. and Mrs. Chaim Walker. A Kiddush-luncheon followed at the Synagogue. That evening, at the Synagogue, two hundred and fifty guests were received. Mrs. Walker wore a full-length pale blue satin gown embroidered with matching seed-pearl-beading, with a straight skirt, draped to one side and finishing in a train; square neckline and cap sleeves. She had a corsage of white orchids. Alice, sister of the bar-mitzvah, wore a white organza dress, appliqued with pale pink and avocado green flowers on the bodice and full skirt; and had an avocado green velvet ribbon which went under the bodice and fell into streamers in back; with a wrist bouquet of roses in shades of pale pink to a deep wine-colour. Diana, sister of the bar-mitzvah, wore a dress of white, over pale pink eyelet organza; and had a wrist bouquet of deep red roses. Mrs. Rosa Dennis, grandmother of the bar-mitzvah, wore a grey satin princess gown, with a full-length skirt, styled with straight lines; and a corsage of green-tinted orchids. Seated at the head table with the above family members was Mrs. Esther Lieberman, aunt of the bar-mitzvah boy. The head table was decorated with a centerpiece of wine-coloured carnations, tulips, and gladioli, arranged with deep French blue tapers and blue birthday cake trimmed with red and white. The individual tables were centered with similar floral arrangements and three deep blue tapers on a blue linen table cloth.

Flags Were Flown At Half Mast For Sprinzak

"He was a man who symbolized and unified all parts of the nation with his understanding, wisdom, tact, and love of Israel." It was in these words that President Izhak Ben-Zvi of Israel expressed not only the nation's loss, but his own personal sense of bereavement on the death of a friend of 50 years standing, Joseph Sprinzak, the first Speaker of the Knesset, who died after a sudden heart attack. As Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion bid a graveside farewell to Jogeph Sprinzak, he said, "It is doubtful whether, apart from the President of Israel, to whom we all wish a long life, there was any man amongst us so beloved by us all as Joseph Sprinzak."

The Prime Minister went on to summarize Sprinzak's long career. His post as Speaker of the Knesset was only the coping-stone of Sprinzak's rich and fruitful life-work, which extended over more than five decades. Sprinzak was among the creators of the Palestine Labor Movement, among the begetters of labor settlement and among the first fighters for the revival of the Hebrew language, which few spoke at that time. He was one of the builders of the organized Jewish Community after the First World War and he was the first representative of the workers of this country in the Zionist Executive."

Mr. Ben-Gurion continued: "All Sprinzak's opponents, both among the workers and in other circles, always felt respect and affection for his sincerity, his integrity and his fairness — and above all for the love of Israel and of all men that was his most outstanding and radiant characteristic. He was devoted to the workers and a man of the people; the Secretary-General of the Labor Federation and Chairman of the Zionist General Council; deeply rooted in the Homeland with every atom of his being and closely attached to the Jewish Diaspora all over the world; a Jew in every fiber — but a man to whom nothing human was alien. He believed firmly in his opinions, but he pursued peace."

It was two days after presiding over the festive tenth anniversary session of the Knesset that Joseph Sprinzak, its beloved Speaker, suffered a severe heart attack and died. The anniversary was also marked by the first appearance of the newly created 25-man Knesset Guard Unit. Mr. Sprinzak reviewed the guards, whose smart blue uniforms were adorned with the crest of the unit: a Menorah (candelabrum), the symbol of the State, on the background of the Wall of Jerusalem.

Many of Mr. Sprinzak's friends, worried by the state of his health, had warned him not to make this last appearance. But, true to the tradition of his long life of public service, he refused to listen.

When the news of the Speaker's death spread through the country there was a feeling of personal bereavement among all sections of the population. Flags were flown at half mast, places of entertainment were closed, many meetings were cancelled, Kol Yisrael scrapped its lighter programs, and schoolchildren attended special memorial assemblies. Thousands of mourners passed by his coffin as it lay in state in the Knesset, and thousands more participated in the funeral procession that went from the Knesset to the Jewish Agency and then on to a windswept grave in Israel's Memorial Cemetery on Mount Herzl.

CLASS IN COOKERY

SWEET AND SOUR CABBAGE ROLLS (CHALUPTCHES)

one large head cabbage
two pounds ground meat
one large onion
one egg
one-half cup water
one-half cup rice
three tablespoons chicken fat one-half cup chopped onion one-half cup chopped celery
one cup sugar
one large can tomatoes
one small can tomato paste (optional)
one teaspoon salt
one-half teaspoon pepper
two bay leaves
three tablespoons chili sauce juice of two lemons
one-half cup vinegar

Cut out core of the cabbage and boil the rest for five minutes. Separate leaves and drain. Mix chopped meat with beaten egg, water, rice, grated large onion, salt and pepper. Place a heaping tablespoon of this mixture on each cabbage leaf and roll up. Fry chopped onion and celery in fat until brown, add remaining ingredients, except lemon juice and fry for several minutes to make a sauce. Put the cabbage rolls in a pot and cover with this sauce. Cook on top of the stove, tightly covered, for two hours. Remove cover and bake at 350 degrees for two more hours with lemon juice added. This serves about eight.

Mrs. Samuel Cohen.
58 Cheritan Avenue, Toronto.

ORANGE SPONGE CAKE

four eggs
one cup sifted cake flour
one cup sugar
one-half cup orange juice

Beat egg whites until foamy, gradually adding one-half cup sugar. Continue to beat until stiff. In a separate bowl beat egg yolks until lemon-coloured, gradually beating in one-half cup sugar and orange juice. Fold egg yolks into egg whites. Gently add flour into mixture until it is thoroughly blended, but do not beat or stir. Pour batter into a ten-inch, ungreased, tube baking-pan and bake in preheated oven at 375 degrees for forty-five or fifty minutes. Baked cake should be golden and spring back when touched lightly. Invert pan and allow to cool one hour before removing.

Taking Real Care Of The Aged: A New Communal Undertaking

Old people should be kept out of institutions, kept in private homes, preferably their own, and kept active, according to Dr. V. A. Kral, one of Montreal's experts in geriatrics. "The ideal thing would be to keep old people in their own private dwellings and establish some service composed of social workers and volunteers who would make regular calls on them", he said. "If they live with their children, their children usually have children, and this leads to difficulties."

Dr. Kral is assistant professor of psychiatry at McGill University and director of the gerontologic unit which was established by Dr. Ewen Cameron at the Allan Memorial Institute in 1943. He also is in charge of the Geriatric Clinic in the Jewish General Hospital, the only one of its kind in Montreal, and geriatric consultant for both the Verdun Protestant Hospital and the Hebrew Old People's and Sheltering Home.

Golden Age Clubs, he said, were fine places for old people to receive advice and stimulate their ideas. He urged old people in the city to participate in the Golden Age Hobby Show sponsored by the Montreal Council of Social Agencies which is being held in the Sun Life auditorium on April 9, 10, 11. "If old people have no earning capacity they should have a hobby", he said. "But for their self-esteem it's better that they earn than have a hobby." Since he and Dr. Martin Hoffman founded the Geriatric Clinic at the Jewish General Hospital in 1955, approximately 150 patients have been admitted. A total of 88 men and women of all faiths, and averaging 75 to 78 years of age, are now under treatment.

The clinic is open every Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. and people over 60 can consult the staff. In attendance are Dr. Kral, Dr. H. Grauer, Dr. D. Sherman, Dr. G. Rosenberg, Dr. N. Greenberg, and a social worker, Mrs. Sally Gold.

"A great surprise to me is that so few of our patients are suffering from senile or organic brain disease", Dr. Kral said. "Most have psychiatric problems, are suffering from depression and we can help them by making them active. Many old people become depressed with their own situations. They get lonely. Their contemporaries and mates die. The children can't help them. They lose their occupations, become inactive and dependent, and lose their self esteem and prestige among the family." A problem confronting doctors is to gain employment for older people who are fit. Women, Dr. Kral said, are better off than men in this regard because they always can be used in the home. "We try to get the men occupied in sheltered workshops where they can earn the same wages as in industry although their work capacity is limited", he said.

Dr. Kral said that an increasing number of old people are consulting the Allan Memorial Institute. "Here again we encounter mainly depressions, some the same kind from which young people suffer and which we treat the same way", he said. Before the war Dr. Kral was assistant professor of psychiatry and neurology at the German University in Prague. He came to Canada 10 years ago, serving for five and one-half years as senior psychiatrist at the Verdun Protestant Hospital for mental patients. In April, 1955, he was appointed to his present position at the Allan Memorial, succeeding Dr. Hoffmann. The first director of the gerontologic unit was Dr. Karl Stern, chief psychiatrist at St. Mary's Hospital.

● CANADIAN FRIENDS ●

Of The Hebrew University of Jerusalem has absorbed scores of students who started their studies in Rumania, and there may be at least 200 more recent newcomers to be absorbed later this year, despite the fact that 1,500 Israelis were turned away this term because of lack of facilities. The usual procedure is to allow new immigrants who cannot afford tuition fees to study without payment for at least the first year. According to the Jewish Agency, a rather high percentage of the new immigrants are academic people and will be referred to the University. Recognition of studies pursued in Rumania will be based on a comparison of the Hebrew University's syllabus with that of the foreign institution and wherever feasible credit will be given.

Cyprus Jews, 150, Are An Organized Community

Dr. I. Schwarzbart, World Jewish Congress, director of organization, reports that there are about 150 Jews in Cyprus in a total population of some 550,000 Though scattered in four towns, Nicosia, 60; Larnaca, 50; Famagusta and Limassol, 15 each, they have a central community organization recognized by the civil authorities. Actually the history of the Jews in Cyprus — dates back to the Maccabean era in the second century B.C.E. But that ancient community disappeared after valiantly participating in the revolt against the Emperor Trajan. In the Middle Ages a small community once again existed in Cyprus but the present community dates back only to 1878.

In that year the British established their rule over the island and, with the help of the Jewish Colonization Association, a group of Russian and Rumanian Jews founded a settlement. By 1901 there were about 120 Jewish families on the island. As the Germans invaded Crete in 1941, the entire Jewish population of nearby Cyprus was evacuated by the British authorities. Gradually, with the war ended, some went back to their old homes. Their return barely preceded the period of high drama in which thousands of hapless immigrants, bent on reaching Palestine, were intercepted and interned in special camps on Cyprus. As far as they were able, the Jews of Cyprus did all they could to care for the needs of the internees.

In recent years the WJC maintained frequent communication with the community which formally affiliated with the world body in 1951. The W.J.C. organization department continued its contacts with the small community throughout the tense period which the island and its population have weathered. The Israel branch of the W.J.C. Executive was also in touch with the community which was likewise actively assisted in its efforts by the Israel Consul on the island.

Even during the turmoil the community, interested in developing its institutions, drafted a plan for the erection of a synagogue and communal center in Nicosia with facilities for religious instruction and for communal gatherings and ceremonies. The community has discussed the matter with the W.J.C. and Dr. Schwarzbart, in his report, expressed the hope that fuller and more frequent contact would be developed between the world body and the Cyprus community in view of the restoration of peace on the Island.

The Role Of The Synagogue In The Community

BY RABBI S. M. SAMBROWSKY, NATIONAL CHAIRMAN, MITRACHI-HAPOEL HAMIZRACHI ORGANIZATION OF CANADA; AND PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF JEWISH MINISTERS OF GREATER MONTREAL

It speaks well for the Synagogue Council of Greater Montreal that its annual conference held in February evoked such interest that it focused the attention of many sections of our community. I therefore welcome the invitation of the Canadian Jewish Review to discuss the significance of the synagogue in relation to our community structure.

Superficiality and over-simplification seem to be the trend of our present generation. Jewish life, too, is a victim of this malady. Hence, it is easy to be deceived and to form erroneous illusions about religious revival, intensification of interest in Jewish problems, and religious awakening.

The construction of costly edifices and the "successful" functions taking place in synagogue buildings are offered as proof for these allegations. But it is mostly because of these proofs which are being offered that we are led to wonder whether the synagogue of today is true to its original function and whether it accomplishes its purpose. Added to this is the often-heard remark, "Why should I join the synagogue, what can it give me, what benefit can I derive from it?" And we are also not unaware of the fact that many who do join do so because of neighbourly considerations and in some instances for reasons of prestige.

The synagogue in the past has yielded its influence on the Jewish community, and molded its life and behaviour. This is such common knowledge that it needs no affirmation. If the Jewish community is to be checked from deteriorating spiritually and from secularization, it can only be achieved by restoring to the synagogue its rightful role. What therefore concerns us most is the question whether the present trend in synagogue life can accomplish this purpose. This must become a soul-searching question.

The role and the purpose of the synagogue has its origin in the Bible. We shall therefore select two passages, one, a very popular one, and the other a least known one.

In the Book of Exodus, Chapter 25, Verse 8, we read: "And let them make Me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them". In the Book of Jeremiah, Chapter 3, Verses 14-17, we read: "Return, O backsliding children, saith the Lord, for I am a Lord unto you, and I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion and I will give you shepherds according to My heart, who shall feed you with knowledge and understanding, and it shall come to pass when ye are multiplied and increased in the land, in those days, saith the Lord, they shall say no more: the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord, neither shall it come to mind, neither shall they miss. Neither it be done anymore. At that time they shall call Jerusalem the Throne of the Lord; and all the nation shall be gathered into it, to the Name of the Lord, to Jerusalem; neither shall they walk anymore after the image of their evil heart."

A superficial reading of these texts would tend to point to a contradiction, between the words of Moses and those of Jeremiah, with regard to the importance they attach to the role of the synagogue. In reality there is no conflict. A more profound study of these texts indicates that the prophet Jeremiah merely proceeded to spell out how Moses' charge could be carried out.

As all biblical commentators point out, God's command to Moses to build a sanctuary was not intended to satisfy the needs of the Almighty. Were that the case, the next would have read: Let them make Me a sanctuary, that I may dwell in it, but the text concludes: "that I may dwell among them". We, therefore, see in the words of Moses that a synagogue does not accomplish its purpose unless it so influences the conduct of its worshippers' life to make it possible for the presence of God to dwell in the hearts of the worshippers.

The prophet Jeremiah, however, is attempting to point the way how to accomplish this task. It should be noted that the prophet Jeremiah is spelling out the approach of making it possible for God to dwell in the hearts of every Jew. He does not call for "successful" functions. He is even not interested in how large an attendance a synagogue boasts of attracting. He does not suggest the employment of gimmicks and all kinds of attractions in order to get the masses, but he does suggest, "and I will take you one of a city and two of a family, and I shall give you shepherds who shall feed you with knowledge and understanding".

There is nothing spectacular nor dramatic about it. Evidently, the prophet fully realized that there are no short cuts to spiritual and meaningful living. It cannot be accomplished through sugar-coating, but "one of a city, two of a family", plugging away with individuals, within small groups, until they become imbued with the spirit of God, and then by examples of their conduct influence the masses.

Anyone who has had any experience whatsoever with synagogue or communal life knows that the difference between a good synagogue or, for that matter, a good community or otherwise, depends essentially on how many good, understanding individuals a synagogue or community may have. This makes all the difference in its pattern and in its usefulness.

Jewish life on this continent, in its attempt to shape a pattern of its own, has been blundering. We do not question the sincerity and dedication of those standing at the helm of the synagogue or community. We have our profoundest respect and admiration for their spirit of dedication, but we do question very seriously their approach. Judging by past accomplishments, we could say that at best they have succeeded in stimulating interest, but have not succeeded in translating that interest to a point of influencing the daily life of their followers. The first and primary function of the synagogue must continue to be as it was at one time. The synagogue must become a spiritual force that creates an electrifying mood for those who come to the synagogue. And secondly it must become, as it was, the greatest unifying force in the community where rich and poor, the learned and the unlearned, were united in a sense of utmost devotion to the totality of Jewish life.

One of the reasons perhaps why the synagogue of today has failed in these respects is because it has embarked upon too many activities in its program, and therefore spreads itself too thin in order to concentrate on its main objective. The synagogue has become too localized in its scope, almost too narrow because of its ambition to succeed, and has thus overlooked its unity of purpose in order to enable it to make its best contribution to the welfare of the community.

Not every synagogue must have a school of its own, unless it can provide the best of a school. Not every synagogue must become a community centre, unless it can create the best in this field. Were the synagogue to concentrate all its attention on its main function and plunge deeper into the lives of its followers, attuning them to be receptive to its spiritual message and to the teachings of Judaism as a way of life for every individual, the synagogue could then make a much greater contribution in influencing the community; and thus become instrumental in the creation of the finest schools, the finest social service, and the finest community centres for the total welfare of the Jewish community.

Yes, and the synagogue has another function in order to discharge its mission: "and I will bring you to Zion". No synagogue is worth the name if it does not indoctrinate its worshippers with the message of Zion. If it is part of the function of the synagogue to make the Torah or Judaism in its totality a dominant way of life, and no one will question that this is its prime purpose, then Zion must occupy a prominent place in the life of the synagogue. Because without the total redemption of Zion, Jewish life cannot be complete.

Some of our commentators call our attention to a parallel in the wording used in connection with the creation of the world by God, to the words ordering the construction of the sanctuary; thus attributing the same importance to both.

The synagogue must be the instrument that translates God's purpose for the development of the human being. It is for this reason that our sages interpret the various symbols and objects in the synagogue as serving merely the purpose of making these symbols the visual spectacles in order for them to make a deeper impression than the spoken word. The synagogue must become the instrument that transforms the teachings of Judaism into a religion of practice and observance, because it is only through the action of precepts that we can hope to make an impress on man's mind.

This is how our sages see, for instance, the placing of the cherubin on the most conspicuous part of the Ark, because the cherubin had the appearance of two babes, one in the form of male, the other female; again symbolizing the idea that every Jewish man and woman should strive from their childhood to spend their days meditating on the laws of God and practising the precepts of Judaism. They were looking on high toward God, their faces one to another, in friendship and true brotherhood, in those things that concern man's relationship to his God and to his neighbour.

It is therefore little wonder that, when Moses charged the children of Israel to build the sanctuary, he first outlined the place of the Ark of the Covenant. The first chore of a synagogue therefore must be the study and practice of the Torah; a Torah-less synagogue is no synagogue.

The true message of a synagogue today must also take cognizance of the fact that there are times when worshippers must think in terms of priorities. This, too, we learn from the Bible. When Moses ordered the building of the sanctuary, he ordered a modest structure, because the children of Israel were only on the road to the Promised Land. The first duty then, therefore, was to accomplish the task of bringing them to the Promised Land. A modest synagogue could inspire such a task.

On the other hand when King Solomon ordered the building of the first Temple, the order was for a most glorified edifice because in the days of Solomon, the children dwelt in a period of peace and prosperity. It should be the task of the synagogue today when the Jewish people are charged with the responsibility of ingathering of exiles and saving the remnants of the Jewish people, to set such an example to the community. Modest synagogues in such trying days as ours will give expression to true spiritual understanding of Judaism.

Now, then, the words of Jeremiah will make sense. When Jewish life is lacking in knowledge we need the synagogue with all its meaningfullness to restore meaning and beauty to Jewish life. The synagogue has the power to bring Jewry back to true Judaism. The synagogue has the power to turn away perversity of the heart, through the holiness concentrated in the Ark of God. However, Jeremiah prophesizes that when the children of Israel will give its allegiance and loyalty to the synagogue, there will come a time when the spirit of holiness will be disseminated among all Israel.

In those days men shall no more say, "the Ark of Covenant of the Lord". It will not occur to their minds anymore that holiness is confined to the Ark alone, but wherever the Jew will be, whether in the home, or in his office, in his factory or in his business, and whatever he will do he will always find himself in a perpetual state of holiness. This is the role of the synagogue in the community. It is to this task that the Synagogue Council of Greater Montreal is dedicated.

NOTED CANCER EXPERT

In 1939 he made a fish-collecting trip to Mexico, acquiring stocks of platyfish and common swordtails that enabled him to establish the fish genetics laboratory at the old New York Aquarium, Battery Park. In 1941, he became research associate in genetics for the Zoological Society, and from 1944 to 1947 was assistant curator of the aquarium. Since 1947 he had been geneticist of the aquarium, with laboratories at the American Museum of Natural History.

Dr. Gordon obtained some of his fish specimens from the Amazon River and was one of the first to capture the strange "blushing fish" and to note changes of sex in fish. At the American Museum in New York he produced spontaneous cancer in fish through special breeding experiments.

He had served also as an ichthyologist for New York State and in many other similar capacities, says the New York Herald Tribune. He wrote many articles on the genetics of fishes and the pathology of melanomas, and had reviewed the books of Julian Huxley and other scientists for newspapers in New York.

Dr. Gordon leaves his wife, Evelyn; a daughter, Deborah; two brothers, Ralph and William; and a sister, Mrs. Bess Spunt.

ISRAEL BOND DRIVE REPORTS RECORD START OF 400 TRUSTEES

A record enrollment of four hundred Trustees of Israel during the first ten weeks of 1959 was announced in New York by Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, Vice President of the Israel Bond Organization. Trustees of Israel are those who purchase $10,000 or more in State of Israel Bonds during the calendar year. The Trustee enrollment set the pace for the unprecedented subscription total of $19,555,250 in Israel Bonds since the beginning of 1959 which was announced at the conclusion of the Inaugural Conference for Israel Bonds in Miami, Florida, which marked the launching of the new $300,000,000 Second Development Issue of Israel Bonds, to provide resources for Israel's program of economic development and immigrant absorption.

"The Trustees of Israel have been the pace-setters of the Israel Bond drive since the group was established in 1954," Dr. Schwartz said. "By their purchases of $10,000 or more, they have offered communities the example and the leadership which have inspired others to participate in Israel's economic development through the Israel Bond drive. "The unprecedented level of Israel Bond sales during the first weeks of 1959, sparked by the role of the Trustees, gives cause for confidence that the Israel Bond drive will achieve its goal of $75,000,000 for the current year. This is particularly vital because Israel must receive tens of thousands of newcomers from Eastern Europe and other parts of the world during 1959. Israel counts heavily on Israel Bonds to help provide the jobs and the homes which these immigrants must have for their complete economic absorption."
